

Yorkie Care Guide

Introduction:

I cannot thank you enough for your interest in proper care of your new puppy. I take great pride in my work socializing and insuring that your new baby has the very best start possible. With that said, even after reading this information, you may still have questions. Please feel free to email any time. My clients are never a bother and the well being of your puppy is always my first priority. I want to personally thank you again for adding one of my babies to your family.

This guide is intended to assist you in preparing for your puppy as well as how to handle him/her once she comes home. I have included lists of items you will need and where to find them as well as tips on various training and socialization techniques.

Puppy Kit and other needed supplies:

You will receive a kit prior to your puppy's arrival regardless of shipping or personal pick up. I mail these out about a week prior to the date arranged for pickup or shipping. Most of the items below are included in your puppy pack, and are noted. Otherwise, you will need to purchase these items prior to your puppy's arrival home.

1. Flea / Heartworm Preventative: I have administered your puppy's Advantage Multi. Feel free to change the type of parasite prevention to any other brand upon the recommendation of your veterinarian. Any brand that is dual function is great. By dual function, I mean a product that controls flea / tick and internal parasites.

2. Food / Snacks: I have included a small package of our custom mixed puppy food in your kit. Feeding guidelines and amounts are included in this booklet. However, I recommend that you change your puppy to either Royal Cannin Yorkshire Terrier Puppy or Eukanuba Small Breed Puppy. Both foods are easy to find in most areas and I have included coupons in the puppy pack as well. I also like Blue Buffalo and Solid Gold for adult dogs. Just make sure you are feeding a high quality food. I use Honey Nut Cheerios as training snacks.

3. Vaccination / Health Information: Your puppy is fully vaccinated unless otherwise documented. Rabies vaccination must be administered by your vet unless otherwise noted. He/She has been vaccinated for the following: attenuated strains of canine distemper (CD) virus, canine adenovirus-2 (CAV-2), canine parvovirus (CPV), hepatitis and canine parainfluenza (CPI) virus propagated on an established canine cell line. In the back of your folder, you will find two copies of your puppy's health info. One is for your records and the other must be submitted to your veterinarian. Please present this at your initial appointment, have your vet / vet's secretary to call me if any information is confusing. Please do not allow your vet to revaccinate without a Titer Test as I am a firm believer that over vaccinations is a very bad idea. Many vets do not accept breeder vaccination charts for various reasons. Your vet can call with any concerns and questions as to my protocol.

4. Microchip Information: Your puppy has already been micro-chipped; and requires no action at this time other than registering your microchip. In your fold, you will find an application for "Home Again," please complete the form and send your payment. Make sure your puppy's microchip number matches the information in your packet. Ask your vet to scan your puppy! You will find a Yellow tag with your puppy's number on it. I advise that you keep this tag in the puppy's folder and do not place it on the puppy.

6. Shampoo: I have included a packet or small bottle; basically it is a tear free shampoo. Any tear free shampoo will work, although those formulated specially for puppies would be great.

7. Misc. Items: I have included several miscellaneous items such as toys, blankets, ECT... Basically, it just depends on what is available when your puppy is ready to go home. I do try to give as many goodies as possible, but they often change.

8. Literature: I have included lots of various literatures in your kit. On the front of your folder is a barcode with numbers, this is your puppy's identification # as all of my puppies are perpetually identified by microchip. This barcode should match every identification number included in the folder. Your puppy's ID# should be on his/her health records, microchip registration application, AKC documents, and on the outside of the folder. In the small pocket on the front of the folder is a magnet with my contact information. Please place this on your refrigerator or somewhere so that it is quickly assessable. Your kit will also include a bound puppy guide with a section in the back for record keeping. It is handy to keep all of your puppy records in one place. There should be coupons for both Royal Cannin and Eukanuba puppy food. Lastly, I have included several flyers and business cards. Your recommendations are what enable me to continue to flourish in a business where others are all too often cutting corners to cut costs. I appreciate every recommendation more than you can imagine. So, please share us with others!

The Supplies You Need prior to arrival:

Before you bring your puppy home, be sure you have the following supplies:

1. Small bag of Puppy food: I recommend Diamond Naturals Small Breed Puppy Food, Eukanuba, or Royal canin to get your new puppy off to a good start. Feeding guidelines are below; however, remember that all puppies are unique. Just make sure he/she is eating and staying active. Pick up some honey nut cheerios for treats.

2. Tube of Nutra Cal for Puppies (purchased at a vet's office or pet supply store) to be administered in doses of 2cc (pea size amount) per day after breakfast and right before you go to bed at night for at least 1 month. This is a high calorie supplement to head off hypoglycemia and give your puppy lots of energy as it grows. Bring to the Airport if your puppy is arriving via air. She may be a bit sluggish when you get her as traveling does take a toll on a puppy. Generally, puppies do fine; however, there is always some risk involved. The nutra cal will help if she is becoming lethargic. Administer the total amount as soon as you take her out of her crate. If she is lethargic at all, administer it immediately. Hypoglycemia is often deadly if the puppy's seizures and it always complicates other issues. If your puppy is struggling with any time of pathogen from internal parasites to kennel cough, hypoglycemia will complicate it.

3. Small stainless steel, non-tip food and water bowls.

4. ID Tag, leash, and harness: Please purchase identification tags with your Yorkie's name and your phone number. These should be on a small collar with his/her rabies vac tag provided by your vet. You will also need both an xtra small harness or smaller and a retractable nylon 6-foot leash. Do not use a leash with a regular collar. This creates issues with the puppy's trachea. Please only leash your puppy with a harness! Your puppy will come micro-chipped, but I advise you not to advertise that fact. I advise that these tags not be placed on the collar. For a comfortable collar fit, allow for some space between the collar and your dog's neck; consider using an adjustable collar. Do not attach a leash to a collar!! Harness only!

5. Crate / Xpen: A travel crate that's airline approved and will accommodate your Yorkie's adult size is important to have. (You only need one crate) This crate will serve as your Yorkie's new "den" at home, when traveling or riding to the veterinarian's office. His scent in the crate will provide comfort and a sense of security during these stressful times. If your puppy is being shipped, he / she will arrive in a hard crate. It will be the crate the puppy has been started in (kennel training) so do bear in mind it will have some "wear." This is only provided if the puppy is being shipped, but I am always happy to pick up a crate for you. Don't hesitate to ask. Xpens are great if you must confine your puppy in a small area, especially if you are training on paper. digitpets.com is where I purchase our xpens, this link will take you to the walk through door type which has worked really well for me. It is recommended that you have an xpen as a puppy needs its own space and this serves as a place where you can place his / her kennel, food / water, toys. I leave the gates open on mine most of the time. The walk-thru gate really helps for cleaning, etc.

6. Enzyme Based stain remover: Accidental soiling will happen and you will need to make sure all traces are gone. I recommend Nature's Miracle available at pet's mart in a red or white gallon jug. This is an enzyme cleaner which does a great job on pet stains and scents.

7. Brushes / combs: 1 fine tooth comb. Daily combing is important to keep coat in shape and only takes a few minutes.

8. Hygiene Items: Dog shampoo (tearless), toothbrush and paste. I generally use a “kids” size toothbrush as it is easier to use and softer than “dog” toothbrushes. Baby wipes come in handy for all sorts of things from cleaning feet to wiping up around the eyes. Nail clippers are a must, but regular human clippers work fine for puppies.

9. Toys: High-quality, safe chew toys ease teething. Also, plush toys with squeaky parts are great. Yorkies also love to play ball, so extra small tennis balls work well. However, sewn on eyes and other parts will be chewed off and pose a choking risk.

10. Flea, tick and parasite controls: I recommend Advantage-Multi available from your vet or online. I use this product because it is liquid and I can split the dose. A 2lb Yorkies does not need the same amount of meds as a 10lb dog. This is personal opinion only and not meant as expert opinion or advice. Your vet will not recommend this for obvious reasons. It has been effective for me, with no problems. However, this is not what the manufacturer recommends. I can explain how to do this as it is very easy and a money saver if that is a concern.

Making a Home “Yorkie” Safe

To make your home safe for your new puppy, eliminate potential hazards around the house and pay attention to the following items:

* Make sure ALL electrical cords are out of reach*

- Keep breakable objects out of reach.
- Deny access to electrical cords by hiding or covering them; make outlets safe with plastic outlet plugs. I mention this twice because even a small amount of electric shock can be devastating!
- Safely store household chemicals and poisons. Just a little bite of mouse / rat bait will kill your puppy.
- Keep the following house and garden plants out of reach: poinsettias, azaleas, rhododendrons, dumb cane, Japanese yew, oleander and English ivy among others.
- In the garage be sure engine lubricants and other poisonous chemicals (especially antifreeze) are safely stored.
- If you own a pool or hot tub, make sure it is not accessible.
- There are several foods off limits to Yorkies, research this well. We advise you keep the kitchen off limits as well as the bathroom. Remember, if you drop it, your puppy will eat it. Medicines can be deadly.

The First Days at Home

The ideal time to bring home a new puppy is when the house is quiet. Discourage friends from stopping by and don't allow overnight guests. Be aware that your puppy will probably be somewhat depressed and may have loose stool. It is generally normal. However, if loose stool persists for more than a couple of day or contains any blood / mucus, vet care is needed. Generally puppies have little appetite the first few days, but you must make sure he/she is eating and drinking. If concerned supplement every day with Nutra-cal in the am and pm. Establish a daily routine and follow these steps:

Step 1: Before bringing him in the house, take him to the area in your yard that will serve as his "bathroom" and spend a few minutes there. If he goes, praise him. If not, proceed into the house but be sure to take him to this spot each time he needs to use the bathroom.

Step 2: Take him to the room that accommodates his crate—this restricted area will serve as his new "den" for several days. Put bedding and chew toys in the crate, leave the door open and line the area outside of the crate with newspaper, in case of an accident. Let him investigate the crate and the room. If he chews or urinates on his bedding, permanently remove it from the crate.

Step 3: Observe and interact with your puppy while he's acclimating to his new den. This will help forge a sense of pack and establish you as the pack leader.

Special Puppy Concerns

Even if your puppy is 15 weeks old, she is still an infant: treat him/her with patience, constant supervision and a gentle touch. The way you interact with your puppy at this age is critical to his socialization. Use these tips:

* Don't bring home a puppy prior to vacation, I will always hold onto your puppy if your vacation is near. He needs to be acclimated to your normal, daily routine without any interruptions for at least a few weeks if not more.

* Supervise your puppy at all times and interact with him regularly.

* Be alert for signs (sniffing and circling) that he has to go to the bathroom, take him outside immediately.

* A young puppy has no bladder control and will need to urinate immediately after eating, drinking, sleeping or playing. At night, he will need to relieve himself at least once.

* Don't punish an accident. Never push his nose in the waste, although verbal scolding is ok if he is in the act. If not, he won't understand, and may learn to go to the bathroom when you're out of sight.

* Praise your puppy every time he goes to the bathroom outside.

* Feed your puppy a formula designed for puppies. Like a baby, he needs nutritious, highly digestible food.

Your puppy must eat every day!

Meeting Your other Pets

Keep resident pets separated from your new puppy for a few days. After your new puppy is used to his new den area, put an expandable pet gate in the doorway or put your puppy in his crate. Give your resident pet access to the area. Let pets smell and touch each other through the crate or pet gate. Do this several times over the next few days. After that, give the resident pet access to the den area with your new puppy out of his crate. Supervise their meeting and go back to through-the-gate/crate meetings if trouble arises.

Feeding Your Puppy

Proper nutrition for your Yorkshire Terrier is the key to helping him live a long, healthy life. The energy requirements of a puppy can be nearly twice that of an adult dog, and a puppy may not have the stomach capacity to eat enough food to meet his needs unless the food is specifically formulated to do so. It is imperative that your puppy is fed a proper diet consisting of an excellent quality puppy food. DO NOT USE A FOOD CONTAINING HIGH AMOUNTS OF CORN. Puppies experience their most rapid period of growth during the first six months of life. Use only a puppy formula for the first year. Overfeeding and weight gain can actually contribute to developmental bone problems. This makes managing food intake very important. Research has shown that puppies are at increased risk for developmental bone problems if they are overfed. Small-breed puppies have unique needs due to their small mouths, small stomachs and their growth spurt to adult size in a short period of time. That's why it's important to pack a lot of nutrition and energy into a small amount of food.

Feeding Instructions

Your new dog's first meals at home are very important. In your puppy kit, you received a Ziploc baggie of our mix. I am providing a few days of food for him / her. Please mix this with whatever brand of food you choose each day until gone following the directions below. Avoid intestinal upsets by using the following steps: *Changing food can be very upsetting to your Yorkie's digestive system. Watch for lack of interest in the new food, weight loss, and diarrhea or constipation. If these occur, consult your vet immediately.

Day 1 - 3: Fill your dog's bowl with 75% of his old food and 25% of the new formula.
Give your puppy 2cc of Nutra Cal

Day 4 - 6: Mix the old food and the new premium formula in a 50/50 ratio.

Day 7 – 10: Feed your dog a mixture that's 75% new premium formula and 25% old formula.

Day 11: Feed 100% of the new premium formula.

Feeding Tips

Use the following guidelines to feed your new puppy properly:

- To determine each serving size, start with the daily amount recommended by the feeding guidelines on the pet food label and divide that number by the number of times a day (usually 3 times) you plan to feed your puppy.
- Serve the food at room temperature and remove the bowl within 30 minutes after he's done eating unless you are unable to feed 3 x per day. Prior to leaving, put a half serving of food in his food bowl to sustain him while you are gone throughout the day.
- After four months, you can feed a puppy twice daily on a regular schedule.
- Always provide your dog with clean, fresh water.
- Do Not feed table food / People food.... I only recommend a few types of treats.... Cheerios Cereal being our favorite or peanut butter teddy bears from Petco's treat bar.

The Switch to Adult Food for small and large yorkies

A Yorkie reaches adult weight between 6 and 12 months. You can probably begin feeding adult dog food at 10 months although I make recommendations individually as the puppy matures. Please do not hesitate to contact us. Remember, I am a life line for you and your puppy throughout his / her lifetime. Never be afraid to call no matter the time or day. Your dog may not welcome the change at first, but don't worry. Follow the exact same directions for changing the food discussed above.

Grooming Basics

No matter what your mother said, it's not just what's on the inside that counts--not, at least, when it comes to Yorkie care. Your dog's health and happiness also are dependent upon a well-care-for exterior--coat, ears, mouth and nails. It is imperative to start early with regular grooming, dental care, and nail clipping. Trust me. Even as a trainer, I have a 5 month old Yorkie that is just a toot when it comes to any of these things. You can give your Yorkie routine every-day care at home. And remember, I am just a phone call away, so never be afraid to call with a question or quick lesson. Also, don't be afraid of the clippers, with some practice, you'll be a pro in no time. It is always easier for me to explain grooming in person if possible, so give me a call for a session on grooming.

Regular brushing helps eliminate tangles and mats and helps your dog get accustomed to being handled. It also gives you the opportunity to check for ticks and fleas, lesions, lumps and changes in his skin and coat. Plus, if your puppy is never used to grooming, he'll really give you or your groomer lots of problems. Pet-supply stores and catalogs sell a wide array of brushes for different coats and conditions. I am always glad to help with selection, etc.

Bath time

Thoroughly brush first. Place your dog in a tub or a basin with a nonskid surface. Hold your dog's collar firmly and slowly pour several pitchers of lukewarm water over his body, being careful to leave the head dry. Think of it like sink bathing your kiddos. They need a gentle hand and a constant eye. You CANNOT leave a dog unattended in the bath or on the grooming table. Soap your dog's body with a TEARLESS dog shampoo, then massage the soap into lather, talking to your dog and praising him as you work. When his body is lathered, move to his head, being careful to keep shampoo out of his eyes, ears and mouth. Rinse and dry your dog's head, then rinse his body. When the water runs clear, please rinse one more time just to be sure. Thoroughly dry your dog with towels. If your dog has healthy skin, you can dry him further with a hair dryer set on low or warm temperature. Ears must be dry inside as well, Yeast infections are a nasty business for Yorkies and tend to develop when the inside of the ears are not fully dried.

Small Yorkies need a bath at least every two or three weeks, except in the winter when twice a month probably will do. Larger Yorkies need bathing a bit more often. Of course, always wash when he is dirty or smells, regardless of when it was last bathed. My dogs always look for the biggest pile of yuck to roll around in, yours will do the same. Always bathe after this type of thing as those yuck spots can be harboring deadly bacteria.

Proper foot care will keep your doggie dancing and help prevent unnecessary pain and infection later on. Most dogs don't like to have their feet handled, so go slowly--one paw at a time--and make foot handling a part of playtime. Remove mats of hair from between the toes and pads of dogs with hairy feet; if ignored, the mats can become as hard as rocks. Then, using scissors, trim the hair between the pads and between the toes so it is level with the dog's foot.

Regular exercise on a hard surface may keep a dog's nails worn down. However, most Yorkies will need to have their nails clipped every few weeks. If the nails are allowed to grow, they may curl inward into the skin and cause a painful infection.

Use nail clippers designed specifically for dogs. One type, known as the guillotine style, has a round opening for the dog's nail and a blade that slides across to clip the nail. Another type works like a pair of scissors. This type puts less pressure on the nail and is more comfortable for the dog. Make sure the blades are sharp. Trim only the "hook" end of the nail. Clipping a nail to short can be painful and may cause bleeding. Frequent trimming of a small amount of nail always is better than waiting until the nail is long. Never trim into the quick -- the live portion of the nail. If the nail bleeds, apply pressure with a napkin and apply a dot of bleed stop.

Ear care generally is the easiest grooming task. Unless your dog has ear problems, ear cleaning needs to be done only every few weeks--at bath time is best. Clean the outermost area of your Yorkie's ears with a cotton ball or cotton swab dampened with water or baby oil. To clean further inside the ears and soften and remove wax, use an ear- cleaning solution. Warm the bottle of solution between your palms, and then squirt the prescribed amount into your dog's ear canal. Gently massage the base of his ear. Remove any dirt or wax with a dry cotton ball. Again, be mindful to dry the ear well...

Getting Adjusted

Like children, puppies need a variety of positive experiences in order to become confident, well adjusted adults. As part of their upbringing, puppies should learn to get along with other dogs, children, and other people, and to accept the many strange sights, sounds, and experiences that are part of everyday life.)

Stages of Development:

I use a biosensory program to jump start the training process and improve trainability and development. Puppies pass through several developmental phases. Initial "dog socialization" begins in the litter. At seven to eight weeks, puppies start to become more independent and ready to explore their environment. Around eight to ten weeks, your puppy will probably enter a fear period. During this period, you will notice that your puppy sticks close to me when you visit and is easily frightened. Understand this stage does not indicate your dogs overall personality. We take the entire 15 week developmental stage to observe behavior. One visit will not provide an overall indication of personality. Please allow us to help with your selection if personality is important. That said, I am not pushy about this and will only advise if asked. Once the fear imprint stage passes at around ten weeks of age your puppy will enter the juvenile phase. He will be more inquisitive and wider ranging in his explorations. I really introduce the puppies to new experiences during this time! Please let us know early if your puppy will be often exposed to travel, children, other pets, ect as I use this information to specifically prepare YOUR puppy to your situation. The juvenile period will last until your puppy becomes a young adult. Watch your puppy carefully, though; some pups go through a second fear period around their fourth or fifth month.

When socializing your puppy, you must keep his health needs in mind. Until your dog's vaccinations are complete, he is at risk of catching Parvo, a widespread and deadly disease. All puppies leave fully vaccinated unless otherwise noted. I use a Dr. Dodd's Vaccination protocol for puppies. You should be extremely careful not to put your puppy down in public places until his shots are complete or in areas where parvo or other contagious illnesses may be present. Consult your veterinarian for advice about what else may pose a health risk for your puppy.

Getting Along With Other Dogs:

Yorkies have a language of their own. Using body posture, facial expressions, and vocalization, they communicate fear, anger, aggression, submission, playfulness, and more. A puppy that grows up among other dogs will learn canine language and be able to communicate effectively. A puppy raised in isolation may misinterpret cues from other dogs, or inadvertently send signals that may anger another animal. Please be aware, a 2lb Yorkie will aggressively posture with dogs many times its size. It takes one bite and the "other" dog is not at fault. You are responsible for the signals your puppy sends. Understand, dogs communicate by posturing so it is best to keep your dog on a leash when unfamiliar dogs are present. Also, I have had Yorkie females who will fight to the death when in season. Please be aware females will fight and you cannot be afraid to get in there and pull them apart.

Also, like children, puppies need to learn appropriate social behavior. When puppies play, an overly enthusiastic nip will result in a yelp from another puppy. Persistent jumping on "mom" may result in a growl or snap of rebuke. In these ways, puppies learn the limits of play behavior. You will have to take on the roll of "mom" in teaching your puppy proper conduct.

A good way to give your puppy these important learning experiences is through "puppy socialization classes." Look under Dog Trainers in your phone book, or ask your local dog club or veterinarian for recommendations. I also supply further dog socialization for our buyers. Although, our puppies generally receive 15 weeks of socialization, so most of that process is complete upon pick up of your puppy. You may also be able to get together with other new dog owners to form a puppy play group.

During socialization, puppies should be allowed free play time. Puppies should be supervised to make sure puppy play doesn't become overly aggressive, especially if there's a big size difference among the dogs.

Puppy socialization with other dogs begins in the litter, and should continue (if possible) throughout the puppy and juvenile growth stages. A well socialized puppy will probably mature into a dog that can be trusted to meet and play with other dogs. If you find your puppy becoming overly aggressive or overly afraid during play sessions, you should seek help from a professional dog trainer to make sure the behavior is corrected before it becomes a problem.

Getting Along With Other Types of Pets:

For many dogs, interaction with other types of pets can be much more of a problem than dealing with other dogs. This is especially true with small animals that run away (behavior which can trigger "prey instincts" in the dog). It's best to not take a chance on allowing dogs of any breed to play with small animals such as hamsters or rabbits. All of our puppies are raised with kittens as I have a farm and seem to perpetually have a litter of kittens....In fact, I think I have supplied all of the farmers in our area with cats for their barns.... Anyway, I do try to expose the puppies on a regular basis to the kittens since this seems to help with the predatorial instinct Yorkies have. Remember, Yorkies were bred as "Mousers," so they will find mice and moles or anything else that scurries about and catch them.

Cats and larger pets are usually less at risk. If you have these pets in your home, your Yorkie should be introduced to them at an early age. Supervise the animals when they are together, and use praise or treats to reward your puppy for good behavior. (Don't forget to make the experience pleasant for the other pet as well.)

DUCK / water fowl FECAL MATTER is highly TOXIC to Yorkies.

Getting Along With People:

Since dogs must live in a human world, it's important for them to deal well with people. Early, positive exposure to lots of strangers, with praise or rewards for good behavior, will help your puppy grow up to become a well-behaved dog.

Invite friends to your home to meet and play with your puppy. Ask adults to crouch down and avoid sudden movements when meeting your puppy... from the pup's point of view, a human is HUGE. If you don't have young children of your own, invite friends' or neighbors' children. I also routinely expose our Yorkies to both younger and older children. (Be sure to instruct children in how to handle the puppy, and always supervise play!) Puppies that are not raised around children can develop aggressive behavior toward children when they grow older. Small children, who tend to run around and make high-pitched squealing noises, frighten Yorkies or prompt Yorkies to growl and nip at them.

As soon as your Yorkie's shots are complete, begin taking him to public places such as parks, where he can meet lots of friendly people. Also, make a point of introducing your dog to people of different ages and races, people in uniforms, and so on; dogs may become very wary when confronted with people who seem "unusual" in any way.

It's important to remember that you are teaching your puppy to be comfortable with people, and to behave himself around them. Behavior that seems cute in a puppy, such as nipping and jumping, is no longer cute when the dog is an adult! Whatever you don't want your dog to do as an adult; he should not be allowed to do as a puppy. Teach the puppy the behavior you want, and discourage the behavior you don't want. Gently but firmly correct unwanted behavior right from the start and you'll have a well-behaved adult dog.

Your well-socialized dog can still be a good watchdog. Your dog is smart enough to distinguish between people who you welcome into your home, and people who should not be there. Your Yorkie will also be keen to noises before you hear them generally altering you if properly taught. I have two girls that will alter with a nudge and never make a sound. Barking is not the only way dogs communicate.

Dealing With New Experiences:

Everyday experiences can be very frightening for your Yorkie. A pan dropped in the kitchen, a vacuum cleaner, or a ride in the car can become traumatic events that the dog will try to avoid forever after.

To prevent this, introduce your dog to as many new experiences as you can think of. Use rewards and encouragement to make the experiences positive, so your dog doesn't develop fears. (Remember to keep new experiences very non-threatening, and avoid startling the puppy)

For example, to accustom your puppy to a vacuum cleaner, first allow him to explore and sniff it without turning it on. Praise him or reward him as he explores. Then, when your puppy is a comfortable distance away, you may start up your vacuum cleaner, stand near it, and call your puppy. If he approaches, encourage him and praise him, or give him a reward. Gradually encourage the puppy to come closer to the vacuum. Repeat this experience several times, with lots of praise and rewards and your puppy will soon have no fear of the vacuum. Never allow your children to tease your puppy with vacuums, brooms, etc.

To get your puppy used to riding in a car, first get in the car with him and play with him, or give him a reward. On the next "outing," drive a few yards while someone holds your puppy and praises him. Work up to drives of a few minutes; keep them short so your puppy won't get sick. Afterwards, play with your puppy so he associates the car ride with a pleasant experience. Let me digress here for just one moment on this subject.... Most deaths in small dogs who are allowed to ride in cars are caused by either being slammed in a door or being accidentally run over. If you are going to allow your Yorkie to ride, as I do, always always always secure your dog prior to cranking the car or shutting doors. Also, crate your dog prior to leaving if she is not taking the trip to insure he doesn't scurry out without being seen. Hurting your pet with negligence is incredibly devastating, so do be careful. If you have children, please make sure they are aware of the dangers that lurk in the driveway (for them a well, btw).

Other experiences to work on with your Yorkie include getting into his crate or kennel, walking on a leash, walking on different surfaces (such as tile, carpet, gravel, sand, grass, and snow), climbing steps, and hearing the doorbell and telephone ring.

You can use the same approach to accustom your puppy to experiences that might otherwise be ordeals for both of you! Try the reward approach when brushing your puppy, giving him a bath, and clipping his nails. You should also teach your puppy to let you handle his paws, his ears, his tail, and even open his mouth without a struggle. (Remember; start with very short sessions and use praise, play, or rewards to keep the experience fun.) This basic groundwork with your puppy will make life much easier when your vet needs to examine him!

Keep new experiences upbeat and positive, and your dog will soon be a confident and happy companion.

Chewing: Puppies and Dogs

Chewing is a very normal behavior for puppies and dogs. They use their mouths for grasping food, gaining information about the environment, relieving boredom, and reducing tension. Chewing appears to be great fun. However, chewing could become a major problem when valued objects are damaged.

Tips for Houstraining Yorkies

As with most things in life, there are hard ways and there are easy ways to get things done. Rubbing a Yorkie's nose in a mess is an inappropriate way to houstrain. This method DOES NOT teach anything. The dog has no idea what you are doing. Trust me, I grew up in the business and have seen things done "the old way." Didn't work then and doesn't work now.... I will not sell a dog if I even get a hint the potential buyers doesn't understand the problem with this kind of negative reinforcement. Using ample amounts of supervision and positive reinforcement is the easy way. Yorkies can be hard to potty train, every potential Yorkie owner needs to know that. NEVER, NEVER believe "15 week old puppies trained to paper or puppy pads" That is absolutely impossible. It may take several months for a small breed puppy to be completely trained as their bladder is the size of a small lima bean. Almost 100% of the time, breeders who say puppies are paper broken by 15 weeks or using a pet door are grossly over exaggerating and setting you up for unreal expectations. I've been working with these dogs for many years. I actively train my puppies every day, even using biosensor training from the first few days of life. I have NEVER had a puppy trained by 15 weeks!

Starting Off On the Right Track

The first course of action in houstraining is to promote the desired behavior. You need to:

- Designate an appropriate elimination area outdoors (same place every time)
- Frequently guide your dog there to do his business and give him your command (time to potty, etc)
- Heartily praise him when he goes

By occasionally giving a food reward immediately after your dog finishes, you can encourage him to eliminate in the desired area. The odor left from previous visits to that area will quickly mark it as the place for the pup to do his business.

Timing Is Important!

A 15-week old puppy should be taken outdoors every one to three hours. Older puppies can generally wait longer between outings. Most puppies should be taken out:

- After waking in the morning
- After naps
- After meals
- After playing or training
- After being left alone
- Immediately before being put to bed
- At least one time during the night

Feeding Schedules

Most puppies will eliminate within an hour after eating. Once you take control of your Yorkie's feeding schedule, you will have some control over when he needs to eliminate.

- Schedule your Yorkie's meal times so that you will be available to let him out after eating.
- Avoid giving your puppy a large meal just prior to confining him or he may have to eliminate when you are not around to take him out. Schedule feedings two to three times daily on a consistent basis.

- Have food available for only 30 to 40 minutes, and then remove it. (This is recommended, but may not be possible depending on your daily schedule. Puppies cannot go without food from morning until you come in from work. Please schedule accordingly.)
- The last feeding of the day should be completed several hours before he is confined for the night. By controlling the feeding schedule, exercise sessions, confinement periods, and trips outdoors to the elimination area, your puppy will quickly develop a reliable schedule for eliminating.

Expect Some Mistakes

Left on his own, the untrained puppy is very likely to make a mistake. Close supervision is a very important part of training. Do not consider your puppy housetrained until he has gone at least four consecutive weeks without eliminating in the house. For older dogs, this period should be even longer. Until then:

- Your puppy should constantly be within eyesight
- Baby gates can be helpful to control movement throughout the house and to aid supervision
- Keep them in the crate when unsupervised.

When you are away from home, sleeping, or if you are just too busy to closely monitor your pet's activities (which are all ok, so don't feel guilty), confine him to a small, safe area in the home.

Nervous Wetting

If your Yorkie squats and urinates when he greets you, he may have a problem called submissive urination. Dogs and puppies that urinate during greetings are very sensitive and should never be scolded when they do this, since punishment inevitably makes the problem worse.

Most young puppies will grow out of this behavior if you are calm, quiet, and avoid reaching toward the head during greetings. Another helpful approach is to calmly ask your dog to sit for a very tasty treat each time someone greets him.

Direct Him Away from Problem Areas

Urine and fecal odor should be thoroughly removed to keep your dog from returning to areas of the home where he made a mess.

- Be sure to use a good commercial product like Nature's miracle available at pet's mart or online to control doggy odors and to discourage "those favorite spots" they tend to find under your bed. Follow the manufacturer's recommendations for usage.
- If a carpeted area has been soaked with urine, be sure to saturate it with the clean up product and not merely spray the surface.
- Rooms in the home where your dog has had frequent mistakes should be closed off for several months. He should only be allowed to enter when accompanied by a family member.

Don't Make Things Worse

It is a rare dog or puppy that can be housetrained without making an occasional mess, so you need to be ready to handle the inevitable problems.

- Do not rely on harsh punishment to correct mistakes. This approach usually does not work, and may actually delay training.
- An appropriate correction consists of simply providing a moderate, startling distraction. You should only do this when you see your dog in the act of eliminating in the wrong place.
- A sharp noise, such as a loud "No" or a quick stomp on the floor, is all that is usually needed to stop the behavior. Just do not be too loud or your pet may learn to avoid eliminating in front of you, even outdoors.

Practice Patience

Do not continue to scold or correct your dog after he has stopped soiling. When he stops, quickly take him outdoors so that he will finish in the appropriate area and be praised. Never rub your dog's nose in a mess. I'm saying this again in case you missed the first time. There is absolutely no way this will help training, and may actually make him afraid of you. This is one of the most important parts of our questioning process for new buyers. I don't always come out and ask straight away, but I do get a read sense of buyers throughout the process. Ill treatment happens the very most with regard to accidents. If you can't handle them, puppies and kids are not for you. I'm not trying to be astute with this comment; however, I really have a problem with people blaming their pets or kids for poor potty training. It is all about your routine and consistency.

The basic principles of houstraining are pretty simple, but a fair amount of patience is required. The most challenging part is always keeping an eye on your active dog or puppy. If you maintain control, take your dog outdoors frequently, and consistently praise the desirable behavior, soon you should have a house trained Yorkies.

Crate training:

Training a puppy to be comfortable in a crate is a popular way to provide safe confinement during houstraining. The majority of puppies will rapidly accept crate confinement when you make the introduction fun. Since it is important to associate favorable things with the area where your puppy is confined, it is a good idea to play with him there, or simply spend some time reading or watching television nearby as he relaxes with a favorite chew toy. If he is only in the area when you leave, it becomes a social isolation area that he eventually may resist entering. Our dogs love their crates. When the kids are getting on their nerves, they head straight to their crate to relax. I rarely have to close a crate door for confinement.

Store his toys in his crate so he will enter on his own to play. You may even want to occasionally hide a treat in the crate as a nice surprise. Our crates are never associated with "punishment." Without exception, our dogs and puppies can be sent to their crates with the door remaining open when told to "go to your room." They know immediately that the behavior exhibited is inappropriate and must have a "time out" period. After a few minutes, I call them out and give them positive reinforcement. Sometimes they "peek" out to see if they are still in trouble.

You should not use the crate for periods that exceed the length of time the pet can actually control the urge to urinate or defecate. If you are gone for long periods each day, you will need to provide a larger confinement area. You may want to consider using an exercise pen or small room. I use exercise pens from www.digitpet.com. I use the 36" black with walk through gate

Taking Care of Your Yorkie's Health

Signs of a Healthy Puppy:

- ✓ Bright Pink Gums
- ✓ Rectal temp between 100 and 102 degrees
- ✓ Active
- ✓ Eating and drinking
- ✓ Formed stools and light color urine

Finding a Veterinarian

Just like you, your new puppy needs high-quality health care on a regular basis. If you are local, I generally suggest you use our vet since he is familiar with your specific puppy. If you are not, ask a number of friends and your local humane society to recommend a veterinarian, and then choose one with these factors in mind:

- Education and experience. Find out how long the veterinarian has been practicing and if he or she is a graduate of a well-regarded veterinary college.
- Specialty. In urban areas, it may be possible to find veterinarians who deal exclusively with the special problems of dogs and cats.
- Location. This factor should not override the areas of education, experience and specialty, but should nevertheless be taken into consideration. A drive across town during a medical emergency can be frustrating and delay needed treatment.

Spaying and Neutering

Spaying or neutering your new puppy is the right thing to do if you're not planning on breeding. For most pet owners, the expense, time and expertise involved in breeding dogs responsibly is beyond their reach. Here are some advantages to having your puppy spayed or neutered:

- For females, there is no mess to deal with during their 21-day heat cycles, which occur every six months—the heat cycle begins in females sometime after six months of age.
- Spaying a female before her first heat cycle will reduce the chance of mammary tumors or uterine diseases.
- Neutered males tend to be less aggressive than intact males.
- With a neutered male, the urge to mark territory may lessen.
- A neutered male is less likely to want to roam in search of potential mates.

When to spay or neuter

Dogs should be spayed or neutered by the time they are six months old. Both operations are performed under anesthesia and may require an overnight stay at the veterinarian's office. Recovery time is quick, with most dogs resuming normal activity in a few days. Most puppies are altered prior to leaving our kennel; however, I do leave the option open to the buyer to use a vet of their choice. Spaying (for females) consists of an ovario-hysterectomy. Neutering involves the removal of the testicles.

Common Health Issues

Small breed dogs are notorious for health issues, so it is important to be aware of what may be a potential problem for your puppy. Below I have listed the main issues breeders as a whole see. However, I do not mean to suggest that all Yorkshire Terriers will have these issues. These are just the commonly accepted issues of the breed.

Hypoglycemia: I consider Hypoglycemia the most common issue of the breed. Basically, it is a sudden drop in the blood sugar level. It can happen to young and older Yorkies alike. Often young puppies are unable to maintain consistent blood sugar given their propensity for high energy and not eating regularly. The best way to head this off is Nutra Cal in the am and pm as suggested in the beginning of the guide. I see “Transient Juvenile Hypoglycemia” most often. Generally, this is quickly reversible by stabilizing sugar levels with eating or use of a high sugar supplement like nutra cal or karo syrup. If discovered in the early stages, it is very treatable. However, hypoglycemia can be fatal if allowed to progress. Again, Transient Hypoglycemia may happen once and never again. True hypoglycemia is a chronic condition caused by overproduction of insulin and must be carefully controlled. The most common triggers are periods of fasting or stress. With young puppies, hypoglycemic incidents are almost always preceded by a stress of some kind. These stresses include: weaning, teething, vaccinations, a change in environment, shipping, over-handling, cold temperatures, intestinal parasites, infections, anorexia, etc. However, I find that our puppies simply play too hard and stress their system or forget to eat.

Watch for lethargic behavior like slowing down, wobbly movements, confusion and any over salivation. Seizures will follow a prolonged attack and these seizures do significant damage. A puppy is that is limp and lifeless pale, almost a grayish white in color is in extreme danger. Again, Karo syrup or Nutri-Cal rubbed on the puppy's gums, under the tongue, and on the roof of the mouth helps tremendously, but vet attention as absolutely necessary.

Patellar Luxation

Yorkies can have knee problems either from birth or due to injury. Even jumping off the sofa can cause injury to the knees. I see it most often in puppies placed in homes with stairs or puppies allowed to sleep in beds and subsequently jump down. The patella acts as a hinge to allow the leg to bend properly by sliding up and down in a small groove. Patellar luxation indicates the knee cap has slipped out of the groove. This may occur occasionally, or it may happen continuously. Patellar Luxation is rated in levels one through four. Most puppies have some subtle level of luxation up until 18 months old. A Veterinarian can quickly diagnose Patellar Luxation; however, you may notice your puppy experiencing pain while running / jumping and possibly hold his/her leg up when the patella is out of place as these are generally symptomatic of Luxation. Surgery is often needed in levels three and four.

Portosystemic Shunt (Liver Shunt)

In yorkies with a liver shunt, portal blood by-passes the liver and flows to the systemic venous circulation; thus, by-products of protein digestion from the blood are present. Unfortunately, because of the incorrect blood flow, toxins are not cleared and circulate in the body. This is the cause of the neurological issues which are usually present with the condition.

A congenital shunt occurs due to a remnant of normal embryonic development left behind. Congenital shunts show clinical signs before 6 months of age, usually between the 10th and 15th week of life. That is why we keep our puppies 15 weeks. During this period, the body is coming off breast milk and learning to process whole foods. If insufficient clearing of toxins is present due to a shunt, the puppy will begin to show subtle signs.

Retinal Dysplasia

Since the normal retina lines the back of the eye, retinal cells receive light stimuli from the external environment and transmit the information to the brain where it is interpreted to become vision. In retinal dysplasia, there is abnormal development of the retina, generally present at birth. The disorder can be inherited, or it can be acquired as a result of a viral infection or some other event before the puppies were born.

Tracheal Collapse

Tracheal collapse is a narrowing of the inner diameter of the trachea which fluctuates with the stage of the respiratory cycle. I like to akin this to sucking on a straw too hard. Often the straw will collapse. You will notice a distinct noise associated with tracheal collapse. Most puppies quickly recover from this once calmed a bit. Generally, it is complicated by chronic respiratory infection, obesity, and heart disease.

UNDERSTANDING YOUR YORKIE'S WORLD

Puppies usually pass time or break the boredom by using their mouths, which may result in destructive behavior. Household destruction occurs because puppies are simply entertaining themselves. Sometimes I unwittingly contribute to a puppy's problem by improper training. Puppies are unable to determine the difference between old shoes and new shoes, or between stuffed toys and the corner of a stuffed couch. Likewise, tug-of-war games can set the puppy up to fail. A puppy or dog entertained by tearing a towel is tempted to attack curtains fluttering in a breeze.

- Choose a variety of good quality, safe products. When your puppy shows you what he likes, buy several more of the same type.
- Hollow rubber toys work well since biscuits can be wedged inside for your puppy to pry out. This gives him a job to do and helps keep his focus away from your possessions.
- Another way of keeping your puppy focused on putting his mouth on the toys is to teach him to play fetch.
- Never take proper chewing for granted. Take an active roll in rewarding desirable chewing with lots of encouragement and praise.
- Give your pet plenty of praise every time he chews on his toys. Occasionally give a small reward to strongly reinforce the behavior.

PROTECTING YOUR POSSESSIONS!

Until you can trust your puppy, he must be under constant supervision or confined to a safe area. During times when he is with you, he might sneak off by himself to chew. Consider using a leash to keep him within eyesight. A crate, dog run, or safe room will keep him out of trouble when he cannot be watched. Rowdy will find every accessible sock in the house and pile them at the back door when I leave if he is not secured. Again, good example of spoiling you dogs. Everyone thinks it is cute except me since I have to pick them up, find the matches, etc.

"Booby traps" are successful since the puppy is alerted during the act that it is unwanted and do not require your presence. A stack of empty beverage cans, arranged to fall over when something moves, can be effective in safeguarding certain objects. Motion-activated alarms are often effective in teaching a puppy to stay off furniture or out of plants.

Puppies: Basic Obedience

A puppy can learn a great deal, even as early as 7 weeks of age, if learning is fun and presented in the form of gentle play. Motivational methods work best for the tender young puppy soul. Reward desired behaviors by offering toys, food and praise so the puppy wants to obey. Whenever possible, try to arrange the situation so he can't make a mistake. Never use physical punishment on a young puppy as you may damage him both mentally and physically.

Most puppies, like young children, enjoy learning, but have short attention spans. The following exercises can be done several times a day. They take just a few minutes, but will make a tremendous difference in your Yorkie's attitude. To establish a positive rapport with your puppy and prevent many future problems, start training a few days after your puppy settles in.

I can only offer very brief explanations here, and trainers have many variations on these concepts. If you run into problems, consult a professional trainer or give us a call. A puppy can start more formal obedience training at about four to six months of age.

Sit:

Move a toy or piece of food (the motivator) from a position in front of the puppy to a point up over his head and say "Sit". The pup will probably raise his head to follow the motivator and in the process, lower his rear end to the floor. You may gently help the pup at first by tucking his bottom under with your free hand. When he sits, praise the pup exuberantly and give him the toy or treat as a reward.

Down:

Show the puppy a tantalizing piece of food or a toy to get his attention. Say "Down" and slowly lower the toy to the floor. If needed, help him down with very slight pressure on his shoulders. (Don't put pressure on his back as you can hurt him.) Give him the toy when he lies down, even if just for a second. Reward profusely. Later you can extend the length of time he must stay down before you give him the toy.

Stand:

Starting with the puppy in the Down position, say "Stand" and raise a treat or toy forward and upward in front of the puppy. Gently help position him with your other hand if needed. Have him hold the stand position for a second or two, then release, reward and praise him exuberantly.

Wait:

Have the puppy sit. Say "Wait" and back away from the puppy, one or two steps. Praise the puppy for staying. After just a second or two, reward, praise, and release. Always reward the puppy when he's still waiting, not after he gets up, so he associates the reward with waiting and not the release. If the puppy gets up too soon, simply repeat the exercise. Gradually increase the time he waits.

Strut (Heel):

Get your Yorkie's attention with a delectable treat at about his head level on your left- hand side. Say "Strut" or "Heel" or "Let's go" (choose one and be consistent) and walk briskly forward. Let the puppy munch a bit as you walk. Go only a few steps at first, and then extend the range. Release the pup and praise him. As the puppy progresses, lift the food a little higher, but do not reward the pup for jumping.

Come:

This game takes two people, and is a great way to get your puppy excited about coming to you. Person 1 holds the puppy back while Person 2 tantalizes him by waving a treat or toy in his face, just out of reach. Then Person 2 runs away, calling "Rover, Come!" in an excited tone of voice. Person 1 releases the pup, who comes running wildly after Person 2! Person 2 rewards the dog with lots of praise and gives Rover the toy or treat she was waving.

When teaching a young pup to come to you, call him several times throughout the day around the house and yard, even if you don't want him to come for any particular reason. Each time he comes, praise and reward him. (You can keep some of his regular dry dog kibble in your pocket and give him one whenever he comes if you don't want to overload him with fancy fattening treats.) The puppy will think coming to you is terrific!

If you don't have an assistant handy, try this game. Have the puppy on a loose long line or flexi-lead. Show him a treat or toy. Call his name and then say "Come!" in an energized tone of voice. If he comes to you, reward with a toy or a bit of food and excited praise. If he doesn't come right away, tug gently on the leash and move backwards, away from the puppy. If you run towards him, he may think you are playing a chase game and run away from you!

As your puppy gets a little older and more independent, the long line or flexi-lead will guarantee that he will always come when you call. This is especially useful outside or at parks where he may find many new and interesting distractions. Always reward him for coming. Never scold or punish the dog when he comes to you. (If you must punish the dog for some bad behavior, just go get him.) Don't use the "Come" command outdoors unless your puppy is on a leash, so you can be sure he will obey. Soon he will realize that he must come every time you call and that coming is fun!

Teaching Good Manners

"A dog should be a pleasure to all and a nuisance to none," says well-known dog trainer Barbara Woodhouse. Teach your puppy the following commands in addition to basic obedience, and he will be much easier to live with. Practice these commands a few times a day in very short play-training sessions. I hear owners fuss sometimes because a family member or someone doesn't want them to bring their dogs on visits. Couple of things to never take personal: 1. some people just doesn't like your pet; please do not push this issue. 2. If your dogs pees on your mother-in-law's sofa ever time you visit, there is only so much pee the sofa can soak up and she can take; again, don't push this issue. My point, always be considerate of other people. There are no bad pets, just bad owners. Don't be one!

Give:

To avoid unwanted aggression and guarding behavior later in life, train your dog to give you his prized possessions and even his food. The best way is to offer an exchange. Say "Give" and offer your dog a treat for his toy. The food offering will inspire most dogs to release the toy without struggle. Praise him heartily. Then give the toy back to him. Make it a fun game that he wins most of the time. Again, I too fall short sometimes with training. Rowdy (my 2lb'er) will fight my 6' 2" husband over his food bowl. Guess whose fault that is? My husband's! It was cute when he was a puppy, not so cute now.

Get it / Leave it (Don't Touch):

Dogs who know the command "Leave it" will let things alone when asked. To make learning fun, play a game with your pup. Start the exercise with the dog sitting in front of you on a leash. With a handful of treats, offer him one at a time, saying, "Get it!" After two or three "Get its", offer him a treat, as usual, but this time say, "Leave it!" Of course he is going to go for it anyway because he doesn't know any better.

When the puppy tries to grab the treat, give him a tiny bop on the nose with the same hand that offered him the treat, and repeat, "Leave it". As soon as the dog leaves the treat alone, praise him, saying, "Good Leave it!", then say, "OK. Get it!" and give it to him. Repeat the sequence four or five times in a row, saying "Get it" much more often than you say "Leave it." The puppy will think this is great fun and will probably catch on very quickly, learning to leave the treat alone when you say "Leave it".

Don't Pull:

To prevent physical damage to the dog, avoid excessive jerking on a Yorkie's neck until he is at least four months old. Also, Collapsing Tracheas can be a real issue, so proper leash training is very important. Meanwhile, use a retractable leash, such as a Flexi- Leash(TM), so the pup can have some freedom, but meets resistance when he pulls. If he lunges, simply turn around and walk the other way.

Off:

No matter what they say, most people do not like it when a dog jumps all over them. Even a small dog can injure a child. The simplest and safest way to teach a puppy not to jump up is to back up when you see the pup coming and say "Off!" Reward and praise the puppy once all its feet are on the ground. You can also tell the dog to "Sit" so he learns something positive to do when greeting strangers. When the puppy is older, more severe measures can be used if necessary.

One warning: If you allow your dog to jump all over you, he may have trouble understanding why you don't allow him to jump all over everyone else. Try to be consistent!

In Your Kennel:

A dog's kennel should be his safe place, his den, his refuge. Your dog can learn to go willingly into his kennel on command. Tantalize your puppy with a treat or toy, then put it into the kennel and say "Kennel" or "Go to bed", or "In your Kennel" (choose one and be consistent). The dog will probably go inside. At first, don't close the door. Just praise the dog for going in. When he's used to going in, start closing the door, at first just for a few seconds. Give the puppy a little treat through the bars when he's inside with the door closed. Extend the time he spends inside the kennel gradually. Never let him out when he's crying as that only rewards crying. When you let the puppy out, don't make a big deal out of it. You don't want coming out to seem better than going in!

Speak / Quiet:

When a person yells at his dog for barking, the dog thinks the human is barking too, joining the fun. "Quiet" is a difficult concept for dogs. The most successful strategy I've found is to train the dog to bark on command before training the dog what "Quiet" means. I rarely even have to say quiet in a loud voice. I generally never have to raise my voice.

Show the dog a treat, make a hand signal and say "Speak". You may have to bark a bit at your dog before he gets the idea, but eventually he will probably give you a bark or two. Praise and reward immediately and with great fervor. Try again until your puppy understands this entertaining game.

Once the dog knows how to bark on command, get him barking and then suddenly say "Quiet" and place your fingers to your lips. This strange action will probably stun your dog into silence. Reward and praise excitedly! Repeat several times a day for a few weeks until your dog knows it dependably. Later, when you yell "Quiet", the dog will know what you are talking about.

Summary:

A dog with good manners is a pleasure to live with and to be around. Training your dog to behave in a socially acceptable way is fun. Your family and guests will thank you, and you will be proud of your pet. Wouldn't it be nice to have a dog that stops barking when you ask him to, who doesn't jump up on people, who doesn't pull you down the street and who will give you even his most prized possessions without a grumble? It's all up to you. Training your puppy is enjoyable and worthwhile. You will develop a rewarding bond with your puppy and an activity you can do together even after the dog is grown. An untrained dog can be a pest, a problem and even a danger. A well-trained dog is a good friend and an asset to his family and community.
